2007-11-26

Fear thy neighbor as thyself: antinomies of tolerant reason

Zizek, Slavoj

Boston University Institute for Human Sciences

http://hdl.handle.net/2144/20158

Boston University
Slavoj Žižek is a Slovenian sociologist, postmodern philosopher, and cultural critic. Born in 1949 in Ljubljana, Slovenia, Žižek completed his PhD at Ljubljana University, and between 1981 and 1985 studied in Paris under Jacques Alain Miller, Lacan’s son-in-law. In the late 1980s, Žižek returned to Slovenia where he wrote newspaper columns for the Slovenian weekly Mladina, and co-founded the Slovenian Liberal Democratic Party. In 1990, he ran for a seat on the four member collective Slovenian presidency, narrowly missing office. Žižek has published over a dozen books and numerous philosophical and political articles, edited several collections, and maintained a tireless speaking schedule. His works include How to Read Lacan (2006), Iraq: The Borrowed Kettle (2004), Revolution at the Gates: Žižek on Lenin, the 1917 Writings (2002), Looking Awry (1991), For They Know Not What They Do (1991). Žižek has lectured at universities around the world. Currently he is a returning faculty member of the European Graduate School, Switzerland, and founder and president of the Society for Theoretical Psychoanalysis, Ljubljana.

Free and open to public | Reception to follow

Inquiries: (617) 358-2778 or ihs@bu.edu
Institute for Human Sciences | 745 Commonwealth Avenue | Boston MA 02215