Leading Cardiologists Join UH Staff

Dr. Thomas J. Ryan of Auburndale has been appointed chief of the newly formed department of clinical cardiology at University Hospital. The announcement was made by Hospital Director Nelson F. Evans.

Dr. Ryan is also a professor of medicine at Boston University School of Medicine. He was formerly chief of cardiology at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

For the first time at University Hospital the principle areas of cardiac care have been joined in one department and are now centrally located on one floor in the Evans Building, the newest patient care-research facility at BU Medical Center.

Featured in the Unit is a 14-bed section which Dr. Ryan heads and which includes an intensive coronary care unit, supplemented by a progressive (intermediary) care unit that utilizes radio-telemetry to monitor patients who are ambulatory; an ultra-modern, cardiac catheterization laboratory; an electrocardiogram laboratory; and a graphic methods department which includes special sound recording and sonar-like devices to study the heart.

Dr. Ryan is a graduate of Holy Cross College and Georgetown Medical School. He did his internship at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York, his residency at Georgetown Medical Service and served with the US Army Medical Corps, 1955-1957.

Dr. Ryan was an American Trudeau Society Fellow in Pulmonary Disease at D.C. General Hospital in Washington, and a fellow in cardiology at Boston City Hospital's Thorndike Laboratory and Harvard Medical School where he held a U.S. Public Health Service fellowship.

Joining Dr. Ryan in the new department will be:

Dr. John F. Keefe of Westwood, who will direct the graphic methods department, is a graduate of Boston College and Yale University School of Medicine. He was formerly in the cardiology department at Boston City Hospital where he was a supervising physician.

Dr. Athanasios F. Flessas of Watertown, formerly a member of the cardiology department at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, will head the cardiac catheterization laboratory. He is a graduate of the University of Salonika in Greece where he also received his MD degree.

Dr. Michael D. Klein of Wayland will head the coronary and progressive care units. Formerly the associate director of the coronary care unit at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Dr. Klein is a graduate of Harvard College, cum laude, and New York University Medical School.

Dr. Chester Keefer Auditorium Dedicated

Dr. Chester Scott Keefer, world-renowned physician, teacher, researcher and medical leader, was honored recently by the medical center he helped create and by the clinical-research organization he directed for two decades.

In a ceremony at Boston University Medical Center, colleagues and friends of Dr. Keefer witnessed the dedication of the Chester Scott Keefer Auditorium in the new nine-story building of the Evans Memorial Department of Clinical Research and Preventive Medicine. The 225-seat facility will serve as the principal meeting hall for the three constituents of the medical center--BU School of Medicine, School of Graduate Dentistry and University Hospital.

Dr. Keefer has had a long and distinguished career in the many facets of modern medicine. He came to Boston University School of Medicine in 1940 as Wade Professor of Medicine and chairman of the division of medicine and director of the Evans Memorial. A short time later, he was also named physician-in-chief of Massachusetts Memorial Hospital, predecessor of today's University Hospital.

During the second World War, Dr. Keefer served as chairman of the National Research Council's Committee on Chemotherapeutics and Other Agents. In that role, he at one time served as the so-called "czar" of penicillin use by civilians. In the early days of mass manufacture of this drug, supplies were still severely limited, and Dr. Keefer was called upon to decide which requests from physicians across the country would be met. All these requests were telephoned or wired to Dr. Keefer in his office at the Evans. For eight months, he was on call around the clock, seven days a week, making the crucial decisions of which infants and adults would be allocated the life-saving drug.

Born in Altoona, Pa. in 1897, Dr. Keefer received his bachelor of science and master of science degrees from Bucknell University, majoring in physics and biology. He obtained his M.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1922. In later years, Bucknell, Boston University and Bates College awarded him honorary doctor of science degrees.

After postgraduate positions at Johns Hopkins and the University of Chicago, Dr. Keefer spent two years at the Peking Union Medical College, China. This institution remains one of the leading medical centers in the People's Republic of China. Since then, Dr. Keefer has had an abiding interest in medical practice and education in the People's Republic of China. ing that post to become dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

As dean, Dr. Silber provided the academic leadership for 30 departments and special programs involving a student enrollment of over 18,000 and a faculty of approximately 850. Many outstanding teachers and scholars were drawn to Texas under Dr. Silber's administration, attracting the attention and support not only of the faculty and students at Texas but institutions and foundations throughout the country.

Dr. Silber received a B.A. degree summa cum laude from Trinity University, San Antonio, Texas, in 1947, where he majored in philosophy and fine arts. He received an M.A. degree in 1952 and a Ph.D. in 1956 from Yale University. He also attended Northwestern University, where he studied music; Yale Divinity School; and the Law School of The University of Texas.

As a teacher, Dr. Silber has won four awards of recognition including the Morris Ernst Award for Excellence in Teaching (1964) and the Danforth Foundation's E. Harris Harbison Award for Distinguished Teaching (1966). He is an internationally recognized authority on the philosophy of Immanuel Kant and the philosophy of Law.

He held a Fulbright Research Grant to Germany in 1959-60, during which time he was a visiting professor at the University of Bornn. In 1963-64 he was the recipient of a Guggenheim Research Grant for study in England, where he was a Fellow of King's College, The University of London. He is an associate editor of Kant-Studien, a member of the board of the National Humanities Faculty, and former chairman of the Texas Society to Abolish Capital Punishment.

Author of numerous publications in the area of ethics and the philosophy of law, Dr. Silber has lectured at colleges and universities and before civic organizations throughout the United States and Europe. He has served as a consultant for foundations and educational institutions, including the Danforth Foundation, The Ford Foundation, M.I.T., The National Endowment for the Arts and the Humanities, and for the Office of Equal Opportunity.

The Hospital was surveyed in accordance with the new JCAH standards which are more demanding than those of previous surveys.

Problems on both sides of the communication fence were discussed recently at an informal luncheon held at Boston University Medical Center. A large contingent of medical public relations professionals and media representatives attended and decided to make it an on-going event. It was the first such meeting to be held in a decade.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, January 21, 1972, at Kennedy Memorial Hospital in Brighton, and each meeting thereafter will be hosted by an area hospital or medical center. Speaking for the Boston press at the luncheon was Herbert Black, medical editor (emeritus) of the Boston Globe.
ALUMNUS FEATURED

Dr. Ernest B. Howard '36, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, was the cover story subject in the October 18 issue of Modern Medicine, a leading national medical journal.

Dr. Howard, selected by the journal's editors as their "Contemporary" for the current issue, has served with the AMA in Chicago since 1948, beginning as assistant general manager. He became assistant executive vice president in 1958, and took his present position two years ago.

A native of Boston, Dr. Howard graduated cum laude in 1931 from Harvard College and received his M.D. degree in 1936 from Boston University School of Medicine.

BUSM PROTESTS BLAST

More than 250 students and faculty members of BUMC voiced their opposition to the recent nuclear blast in Alaska.

Petitions were circulated and telegrams sent to President Nixon, Supreme Court Justice Warren Burger and the members of the Massachusetts congressional delegation.

Heading the drive was Dean Ephraim Friedman, 41-year-old native Californian and member of the Sierra Club. He was joined by students, staff and faculty members from 16 states in the union.

Far East, and he has returned on several occasions to consult with medical leaders in that area.

In 1930, Dr. Keefer returned to this country and, for a decade, was associated with Harvard Medical School's Thorsdike Memorial Laboratory at Boston City Hospital. Prior to his initial appointments at BU School of Medicine, he was director of Harvard's 4th Medical Service at Boston City.

As director of the Evans Memorial Department of Clinical Research from 1940 to 1955, Dr. Keefer strengthened the organizational structure of the department and attracted outstanding clinical investigators to its staff. He oversaw the building of a new Evans facility which allowed the number of patient beds to increase more than fivefold, and provided many times more space for clinical research.

When Dr. Keefer was called upon to accept the deanship of BU School of Medicine in 1955, he insisted that the formal title be "Dean and Director" of the school and its associated teaching hospital, Massachusetts Memorial. He thus emphasized what he felt should be the close working relationship between the school and hospital—a relationship which was formalized in 1959 when the Boston University-Massachusetts Memorial Hospital's Medical Center was formed. This union, the first step in the formation of Boston University Medical Center in 1962, was presided over by Dr. Keefer as director. He resigned as dean and director of the School of Medicine and chairman of its division of medicine to accept this new position.

Boston University honored Dr. Keefer in 1961 by appointing him University Professor—a university-wide appointment that recognizes excellence achieved in research and teaching. Dr. Keefer resigned his position as director of the medical center to accept this new appointment, citing his desire to "devote my full time and attention to University work in teaching and research, and in the training of physicians and clinical investigators."

Formally retiring in 1962, Dr. Keefer has maintained an active role in the university and Medical Center since then as Wade Professor of Medicine and University Professor, Emeritus.

Tributes to Dr. Chester Scott Keefer

The following are statements by leaders of Boston University Medical Center concerning the achievements of Dr. Chester Scott Keefer:

Robert W. Wilkins, M.D.—Physician-in-chief, University Hospital; Director, Evans Memorial Department of Clinical Research.

"Beginning in 1940, as director of the Evans Memorial Department of Clinical Research, Dr. Chester Keefer over the years completely remolded it into one of the outstanding clinical-research organizations in the world. First he recruited promising young investigators who later made their mark as researchers and teachers not only in the Boston area but in medical institutions worldwide. In 1941 Dr. Keefer oversaw the construction of a new Evans Building which greatly expanded the number of patient beds, laboratories, and other facilities."

Lewis H. Rohrbaugh, Ph.D., Director of Boston University Medical Center; Academic vice president, Boston University.

"The name of Dr. Chester Scott Keefer will live forever in the annals of American Medicine. In particular he will be remembered by the Boston University Medical Center family as the initiator of this organization. By combining his talents in clinical medicine and research with his superb ability as a teacher and administrator, he was able to draw together the two basic components of a medical center—the medical school and hospital. The formal union of these institutions has served as a nucleus for the development of a medical center to which may be added all those functions of the University pertinent to health. Without Dr. Keefer's personal strength and commitment to this enterprise, it is doubtful that the Boston University Medical Center as we now know it could have come into existence."

Area Hospitals Join Facilities And Staffs To Battle Cancer

Eighteen hospitals are linking their resources and talent in a pioneering program to provide special care to cancer patients in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine. Boston University Medical Center initiated the program two years ago with eight hospitals.

An application has been approved by the Tri-State Regional Medical Program and nearly $1 million in funding is pending. Tri-State is a federally funded, private corporation supported by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

This program, one of the first comprehensive regional medical efforts in cancer care in the nation, will have a total of 25 members, representing 7,000 cancer patients, cooperating in the diagnosis and treatment of patients, sharing facilities and receiving continuing education. Quick consultations are available via a telephone "hot line" linking participants.

Director of the regional cancer program is Dr. Mozden, chief of the Oncology Section of University Hospital. "The cooperative program," he said, "will create linkages between participating hospitals to provide ready access to the specialized knowledge and facilities required for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer patients.

"Continuity of care will remain with the patients' physicians, augmented when needed by advice from specialists in the medical, nursing and social service professions from BU Medical Center and cooperating institutions."

Dr. Schilling is co-director of the program and Dr. Emerson Thomas, Jr. is Regional Medical Program Coordinator at BU Medical Center.
